

Shanna Bradfield taught students with autism for 11 years in grades K-8 in three different school districts before beginning her work with the Pennsylvania Training and Technical Assistance Network (PaTTAN) and Allegheny Intermediate Unit 3. Bradfield holds a bachelor's degree in elementary and special education from Temple University and a master's degree in elementary education with reading specialist certification from Chestnut Hill College. She also holds a Supervisor of Special Education certification from the University of Pittsburgh and a Principal K-12 certification from California University of Pennsylvania.